market reporting prices 10 to 20 cents lower and cows bad, frightened out some of the speculators here. The packers were wanting cattle and took most of the butchers that changed hands. There were a few stock steers among the offerings which specified and the speculators which can be stock to the specific sp sold quickly and at a good price for the . One shipper had in about two cars of good yearling heifers, but was not satisfied with prices offered here and went on to Kansas City. He will probably think Wichita a good cattle market when he comes to figure up after selling else-where. The market closed weak and a

There was a big run of hogs and it was a little supprising to every body. The market opened strong at yesterday's prices. Prices got stronger after first advices from Kansas City showing the mar-ket strong to higher. One load of good hogs sold at $3.25, which was the top for the day. Taken all around the market averaged about 5 cents higher than yesterday. Both the packers purchased liberally and evidently got all the hogs they wanted as they would not offer within 10 cents of the ruling price of the day during the latter part of the afternoon. Salesmen would not listen to such figures, conse-quently several loads were carried over. The Chicago market was firm and Kansas City closed 5 to 10 cents higher.

ANCIENT ENGINEERS.

THEIR FEATS OF SKILL WHICH MOD-ERNS CANNOT EQUAL.

The Engineering of Old Times - Presen Obstacles to the More Advanced Men of Our Day - M. Eiffel's and M. Bartholdl's Conclusions About the Colossus.

The bumptiousness of the modern engi-neer gives little offense, because it is honest and guilleless.

It is waste of time to ask him how the bowlders of Stonehenge were conveyed to their resting place, how the walls of Flesole or Mycene were build, these marvels represent the power which lies in the brute force of multitudes, and there's an end of the question. Engineering nowds an art and a science, with which the rude work and a science, with which the rude work of the savages, has no sort of connection. One must mut including why he takes it for granted that Stonehenge, for example, was built by savages, where the brute multitude came from, how they subdated on Salisbury Plain, or why it is necessary to

All that is chose jugge-beyond dispute.

If you dite records of antiquity which tell of works he cannot rival that fact alone is or works he cannot river that more above is proof that the record is a list for how can it possibly be that mere Greek's and Bomans should have been able to do what the build-ens of the Effei tower and the Forth bridge cannot accomplish? We had an arrusing instance of this feeting lately. The in-genious M. Effei and the artistic M. Bar-thoddi have been gravely conducing the genious at hance and the thold have been gravely pondering the Colossus of Rhodes—measuring it and weighing it as per description; and they weighing it as per description; and they conclude that the thing was simply impos

THE COLOSSEUM. It could not have been set up, to begin with, and when set up it could not have stood the pressure of the wind. This is natrated by all the rules of modern soience, and he who does not admit the demonstration must be prepared to show that two and two do not make four. Those that two and twe do not make four. Those antique personages who professed to have seen the Colossus were victims of an ocular delusion or first story teliers, and that greater number who mention it incidentally, as we might mention the rolls of the Colossum, were credulous gossips. The fact is that Messrs. Effel and Bartholdi argue in the fashion usual with engineers. Not all of they mention testants. orgue in the manion usual with engineers.

Not all of them would pretend that they know any law of natore which applies in such a case. But very tew would listen patiently if it were urged that the ancients knew some laws with which they were unacquainted.

So it appears, however, to the disinterested student, and we can bring forward evidence enough. If it be true that the Colossus of Rhodes is really proved "impossible," according to the best modern uthorities, this is a good illustration to begin with, for its existence is as well au-thenticated as the temple at Delphi and the statue of Olympian Zeus, or the Tower of London, for that matter, to one who has never seen it. By some means, it was set up, and by adaptation of some natural laws it was made to stand until an earthquake overthrew it. One is embersas by the number and variety of allustrations mind.

Since the Colosseum has been mentioned we may choose examples of the class. Is M. Eiffel prepared to put an awning over Trainigar square when the sun shines, and remove it promptly without the aid of a central support of steam engines or even chains? The sees of the Colosseum is certainly not less. This may com triffing matter to the thoughtless because they have never considered it. Rower engineers have never constanted it. Therefore engineers covered in that wast expanse with some woolen material; and they worked the ponderous states so easily and smoothly that it was drawn and within an a the sky changed. The buth of it must have weighed hundreds of tens, all depending by ropes from the circumference. But the ancients thought so little of this feat that they have left us only one trivial detail of AREMANDER'S GIGANTIC TENT. So Julius Casiar stretched an awning above the Forum Remanum and great part of the Via Sacra in the space of a single night. Have any of our modern engineers Alexander's durbar tent before Babylone That, again, appears to have had no central suppore. It was upheld, says Phylarchus, by eight pilless of solid gold. Of the glorious plenishing within we have not to speak, since our theme is mechanics. Around the throne and the great courtless stood 300 Miscedonium guards; in a circle beyond them 500 Persian guards; beyond these again 1,000 archers. To fix a tent which held 2,000 soldiers on duty with aucossaive circles, the most gospeeus Ori-ental court that ever was, with hundreds of astraps, counciloss, generals, cunnels and slaves, would perplex a mechanician of the Nineteenth century.

He will reply that the story is falsemust be because he sould not match it. Happily the awning of the Colom stands beyond dispute, and a lexender's tent is a small matter compared with that. But we unfertook to dear with the enginearing of the ancient-in connection with the theatre, having changed on that class of illustration. Phay tells how Matellus Sonaras, Addis, built, a wondrous edifice, which stirred his rival, C. Qurio, to frantic jealousy. It may be worth while in pass-ing-since we are all so much interested in the theatre newedays and think so much of our new ones—to tell what sort of a building that was which Ourio set himself to outdo. It had 500 marble columns, each 38 feet high and 39 feet apart. Above 2,000 bronze statues school among them. The stage hed three floors, as was usual—the lowest paved and flued with marble, the second with glass, the third gilded, boards and all. It held 30,000 people. Such was the winder which Curio re-solved to beat, and feeling himself unable to vie in outly be summoned the engin-eers of the period to design something which would "fetch" the public. The built two enormous theatres of wood, each to contain an audience of 25,000, which stood back to back. When the spectators assembled in the foreneon Curio was chaffed, no doubt, on But the audience returned in the afternoon, for these entertainments were de voted to the manes of Curio's father and insted a month. In the place of two thestres back to back they found an amphi theatre holding 80,000 persons, wherein gisdiators and wild beasts contended until dawy eve. The two great buildings had been swung round and united, and day by day for the month following this col trick was repeated.—St. James' Gazette.
